Internet in Afghanistan

OverviewHistoryLegal and regulatory frameworksStatistics and servicesCensorshipExternal links

Afghanistan has a history of internet usage, though under the Taliban governments it has sometimes been subject to broad shutdowns. The internet had officially become available in 2002 during the presidency of Hamid Karzai. Prior to that year, it was prohibited because the Islamic Emirate of Afghanistan believed that it may be used to broadcast obscene, immoral and anti-Islamic material, and because the few internet users at the time could not be easily monitored as they obtained their telephone lines from nei
